

Central Computer Distribution's specialized capabilities and solutions can benefit small to medium businesses by using industry leading hardware, software and technical services. Our service, sales and consulting staff are all experts in their field, working cohesively and seamlessly with each other to bring our customers an unprecedented level of value to each project. Implementing new thoughts, ideas, and concepts into any structurally-sound business model is always an intimidating task, but the current market requires an open mind and the diligence to be on your toes at all times. As a business owner, you must remain fully aware of the information being distributed throughout your organization, and how secure its privatization can and will be. The decision to enlist an IT service provider can give an added sense of reassurance for you and your customers while also sustaining a viable platform upon which your business can confidently succeed and grow. While there are a host of service providers whose specialty lies within the various facets of information technology, few are able to react within the necessary response time, nor with the desired skill set that the decision-makers of today expect from their outsourcing experts.

There are (4) key factors in considering an IT Service Provider for your business.

1. Exclusive Support

The quicker a company responds to any threat, the lesser chances are that your business suffers. Exclusive support that is ready to identify and rectify any problems in your system on a 24/7 schedule is a must for any business owner seeking support from an IT company.

2. Integrated Solutions

Make sure your IT outsourcing company is prepared to embrace your technological transition with service that readily integrates the old with the new.

3. Technical Expertise

An IT services provider should be able to offer quick access to product vendors through already-established recognized partner programs & certifications.

4. Local & Remote Service Coverage

Having a support system on-hand wherever needed at any location throughout the United States is a must for total support.
